The Counsellor at the Body.

The connection of the mind and body is one of the most curious and important subjects that can engage the attention of the student of human nature. It involves the whole body, and, however difficult, its true study may be made useful to a knowledge of that exercise for a single day perceptibly affects them unfavorably. Few more obvious advantages arise from the course.

1. Every muscle in the body is gently and uniformly brought into action by the swing of the legs and arms; and consequently of the trunk in a vertical direction. The undulations made by the head, chest and abdomen in a vertical plane are these not only according to Hogarth's "line of beauty," but also in that tending to perfect health. Every internal organ is gently stimulated to more robust action. The circulation goes more freely and uniformly.

2. Next to a common walk does a person breathe to any the same air because he is constantly changing his position. This facilitates a free and healthful advantage. Some writers contend that the respiration of inferior animals is one of the most fertile causes of consumption.

3. Exposure to the animal frame, and their absence is correspondingly felt in a depression of the powers.

Nevertheless one cannot deny that there is a great energy sometimes given by a brisk walk in a cool day, and that of moonlight night when the atmosphere is not only free from all the long musicians, but absolutely pure and admirable for breathing.

A BARROW LOAD.—A man and his wife seeking to break the neck-bone of habitual fighting and scolding entered into an agreement of this nature. The one who first lost temper with the other or with the children was to be punished by a ducking. The unwilling through which in this humiliating manner was to be carried was to be the world was not specified in the contract but the husband understood that it was to be through the Bridgewater. The wife quietly bridled end of his tongue off the first time it slipped, snapping up the harsh words, who turned to escape her lips. But both were dreadfully pained. On the afternoon of the second day, when the husband flew into a passion simply because one of the children polish. But she changed feet with a blocking brush while he was taking his quiet up. At the first burst of anger, his wife quietly stood and put on her bonnet.

"Where are you going?" he inquired upon reflection.

"To publish you," she replied.

"Oh, well go ahead, the boys at the office want a new mark for a blast.

But I'm not going to the printing office."

"Where, then" she asked in surprise.

"To the sewing society."

The upshot of the matter and long and earnestly he begged her not to make the weakness known throughout the length and breadth of the land. Finally, in consideration of a new silk dress, by him to be delivered, she agreed to let him off. But it was a narrow escape.—The Bridgewater.

WALKING AS AN EXERCISE.—Dr R. I Boardlitch has been writing a series of articles for the London Sanitary Record on "Health and the Means of Preserving It" in the third paper, which is devoted to "Exercise," after enumerating the principal kinds, as walking, running, dancing, horseback riding, driving, gymnastics, boxing, bowling, rowing and swimming, he goes on as follows:

Of these the most universally applicable and usually the best form of exercise is walking. Unfortunately our climate, with its snows and, in some cold in winter and equally intense and depressing heat in summer, prevents all of us from walking as much as would be useful, or as much as can be done in some other countries throughout the year. Wherever it is feasible, it probably exercises the whole body better than any other method. It is, however, in a very unsatisfactory form in a large city, if made simply for health's sake.

Therefore it is always well to combine with it another object, either of business or of pleasure. Hence's profession that will compel out-of-door exercise is the best prescription one can give. I have in recollection now a case of a naturally feeble man who had very decided signs of pulmonary disease, with bleeding from the lungs. He was a newspaper carrier when he called to see me after one of his bleedings. I feared, at that time, that exposure during the winter would be very perilous; but, fortunately, he took to him. Under this exercise, however, taken daily in rain and storms of all weather, and by the use of cod-liver oil, he vitally recovered.

Those of my patients who have most frequently received are they who, by advice

OF AUGUSTA.

BUNKER HILL DAY.

The centennial anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill was celebrated yesterday in Boston and vicinity with the most imposing display ever witnessed in this country. The demonstration seems to have exceeded in proportions the most extravagant anticipations and in all respects to have been worthy of the great historic occasion. Everybody in Boston seems to have taken a holiday and the telegraphic reporters have only found time to send enthusiastic accounts of the celebration. The crowds in Boston apparently choked off all news from elsewhere, and we are without any knowledge of the Beecher trial or other ordinary topics. But as such an occasion does not come in Boston oftener than once in a hundred years, we must let the Bunker Hill jubilee suffice for one day's news.

THE MAINE REPUBLICANS

Below we present some extracts from our exchanges, showing that the candidate and platform put forward at the Portland Convention meet the hearty commendation of Republicans in our own and other States. The first note of the campaign has gloriously sounded, and the Republicans of the State are preparing for a vigorous advance upon the enemy's works.

[From the Kennebec Journal.]

The Republican State Convention held at Portland yesterday was a grand success. In numbers it was large, and in the character of the men who composed it it fairly represented the nobly party that has governed the State the last twenty years. The new men of the men present who at its first organization enlisted under its banner, but the convention was largely composed of younger men, men who had seen service in the war men who had arrived at manhood since the party was formed. It looked and was a body of live men enthusiastic, energetic, moved by principle and resolute to accomplish its work.

The nomination of a candidate for Governor was effected with the utmost harmony. The convention was a unit for General Selden Connor. When his name was presented as the nominee of the convention the announcement was greeted with rapturous applause, in which the whole body of delegates joined as one man. Never was a more flattering nomination made to any candidate for Governor in Maine for it was not the triumph of a majority over a strong minority, as usually is the case in State conventions, but the united voice of one of the best representative assemblages of the Republican party that ever met to nominate a standard-bearer for the state campaign. The appearance of General Connor upon the platform, and his handsome response to the nomination were enthusiastically applauded.

We have already published in these columns a sketch of General Connor, which it is unnecessary to repeat. Suffice it to say that he is the prime of life liberally educated, tall bred honest, capable in business and public affairs, approachable and affable to all and carries upon his person the evidences of his gallantry in the war. It has been said that he is young and unskilled in public affairs but there are some persons who believe or affect to believe that a young man should be advanced to positions of honor and responsibility and yet the history of the world is full of evidence to show the absurdity of such a position. General Connor was old enough in the rebellion to fight well for his country, and he is old enough to fill the place of Chief Executive of the State with honor to himself and to the people who will glory him upon. He has a good head and heart which can be trusted in all emergencies.

The platform will be found in another column. It is made of solid timber. It takes up National and state questions squarely, presenting boldly the issues upon which the campaign will be waged. It justly acknowledges the merits of Gov. Grant and Congress and the administration.

With such a candidate and platform, Maine will fall up one of the largest Republican majorities in September, promising proper effort is made. Let our friends proceed to do this now see to it that the essential work is done. Be not hasty, but doing this with the highest success will be ours.

[From the Lewiston Journal]

Notwithstanding the general expectation that the gallant General Selden Connor of Augusta would be unanimously nominated as the Republican candidate for Governor it was to many of the delegates present a surprise and pleasure when the nomination was made. Every one of the men present who at its first organization enlisted under its banner, but the convention was largely composed of younger men, men who had seen service in the war men who had arrived at manhood since the party was formed. It looked and was a body of live men enthusiastic, energetic, moved by principle and resolute to accomplish its work.

THE CELEBRATION

Imposing Patriotic Pageant!

Welcome to the Southern Troops.

Exercises at the Monument.

BOSTON SWARMING WITH VISITORS.

BRILLIANT ILLUMINATIONS IN THE EVENING

The Crowds Assembling.

BOSTON, June 17. The expectant thousands thronging the city on the occasion of the most eventful anniversary experience every thing that can conduce to the enjoyment of the magnificent pageants. The sun rose upon a cloudless sky with a perfect June day. From early morn the many trains of cars entering the city have been depositing on their platforms by thousands. All up this hour 2 P M the streets have become one dense mass of humanity, rendering pedestrianism a matter of great difficulty. Teams are prohibited from the streets whether in use or not to right sides along the route of procession buildings provided with a surging mass of people. Notwithstanding the crowd order is unbroken, but few arrests have been made.

The Military Review.

The first event of the day was a review of Massachusetts militia and military visitors. This was set for 9 o'clock, but it was not till after 11 that the right of the procession was seen leaving the parade on the Common. A few minutes it marched up Beacon street and past the state House. A large stand was erected in front of the east from which Governor Gaston, the Legislature and invited guests reviewed the troops. The State troops were well received but genuine enthusiasm was reserved for visiting militia, especially the Philadelphia regiments. The New York 7th, the Maryland fifth, and Charleston Light Infantry

"My Maryland."

The Maryland regiment bore the elegant flag presented to them yesterday and, although dressing into comparison with many of the regiments from other States, and was received with the enthusiasm which always attended its appearance in public. This is evidently the favorite with Boston people

The military division of the procession was over two hours in passing the State House, and was the largest display ever made by the State militia. The procession was under command of Gen. B. F. Butler, who ranks as Major-General of State militia.

Distinguished Guests.

Among the distinguished guests were members of the diplomatic corps, Vice-President Wilson Generals Sherman, Burnside and Hawley Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, the Governor, Senators and Congressmen, from Maine and Massachusetts Governors of New Hampshire Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Michigan and Maryland.

Reviewing Stephen.

While the military review was proceeding at the State House, DeMolay Commandery of Knights Templar, Boston, escorted their visiting brethren, Richmond Commandery to Charlestown, where they were received by the Cour de Lion Commandery and thence escorted to Odd Fellows' Hall. Addresses of welcome were made by Hon. Richard Frothingham of Cour de Lion Commandery and by Grand Commander W. B. Isaacs, which were responded to by Ex-Governor Walker of Virginia. Complimentary calls made by Eminent Commander Benson of Cour de Lion Commandery and Eminent Commander, W. E. Tanner. A collation closed the exercises

The Embargo Memory.

Early this morning's procession of Artillery and Sheridan's paraded the principal streets and then marched to Mount Vernon square. The streets were densely crowded and the procession which required three-quarters of an hour in passing a given point, was the most successful that ever exhibited in Boston. The effective feature of the procession were the enthusiasm of many events which occurred a certain way

Casualties.

Numerous casualties are reported at Police headquarters, result ng from carelessness. In Charlestown a young man was thrown from a wagon and instantly killed. A man was run over by a freight train at Chelsea bridge, on the B. & L. road and killed.

Procession Delayed by the Troops.

The Display of Remarkable Magnificence

At this hour (2 P. M.) the procession has not reached State street, but the ceremonies at Bunker Hill will be delayed at least two hours. Every detail of organization seems to have been carefully provided for, but the dense mass of humanity which throngs every avenue clogs the streets to such an impossible to unite different portions of the procession. It is perhaps, impossible to estimate the number of strangers in the city, but the lowest estimates number them by hundreds of thousands.

The display is the most magnificent ever seen in this city, if not in the country. Business is entirely suspended and the city presents a grand scene of cultural and public celebration never before witnessed in any American city.

Impudence at the Delay.

The grand review at the State House, the night magnificent in itself, having commenced for the delay which is caused to the main body, and impatient walkers were not slow in denouncing the authorities for detaining the odes, which were the main attraction of the day, so long. The weather held fine and a refreshing breeze from the northwest prevailed to take off the effect of the sun's rays and the sun itself for a good portion of the time was obscured by thin but not threatening clouds which proved a boon to the spectators as well as to the troops, who, when they emerged from the procession at 1.45 P.M. had been on the march five hours, and that without food.

The Line Completed

But at 1 P. M. the line was completed and the long march for Bunker Hill began in good form over one of the finest decorated routes ever seen in the country. Following the strong police guard, headed by Chief Savage in pressing came the four battalions of infantry in escort of the Chief Marshal Gen. Francis A Osborn, whose finely mounted staff were much observed of all observers

Then came the 1st company of Cadets of the 1st, the body guard of Gov Gaston, who occupied columns of the troops. He was greeted everywhere with enthusiasm. The 2d company of Cadets, of Salem, was body guard of Major-General B. F Butler, as command of the State Militia, whose martial appearance and steadiness in marching elicited the recognition of the populace, kept him in constant response to cheers along the entire route. The 3d Lt Gard, Gen. Chas A. Devens, had the right, and was led off by the 8th Regiment, which in 1861 joined with the 7th N Y in opening the road to Washington They looked well in their dark blue, with white trimmings. The 8th Regiment, which lost so many men in its passage through Baltimore in '61 came next, making a fine appearance in fatigue and light blue. The 5th followed finely mounted on the best blue mounted and equipped cavalry. The 2d Artillery, 16 guns, and the Unattached Cavalry brought up the rear of this brigade.

The first brigade commanded by Gen. Geo Burrill was set off by the Ninth Regiment which attracted all eyes by its scarlet coats, white trowsers and green plumes. The Third Regiment had a solid look in its dark blue and relieved was and the First Regiment appeared remarkably well in its dark green cloth and bearskins. The Second Battalion of Infantry (colored) the First Light Artillery and the Cavalry Battalion had the left of this brigade.

The third brigade, General Robert B Chan berlain was led off by the Second Regiment, fine looking men, the Tenth Regiment followed dressed in red, white and blue. The Fifth Artillery brought up the rear of the escorting division, and the rear

The Visiting Troops

in a division commanded by Major Healy Illing the

The Seventh New York Regiment with its precision in wheeling and marching, was the first to appear and receive rounds of applause at every point. The greeting was a perfect ovation. The First Pennsylvania in its handsomely contrasting uniform and heavy marching order closed followed by the Second Pennsylvania in light order, were also well welcomed. The natural line of the latter receiving respect. Then came the Philadelphia bodies, including the Washington Grays of Philadelphia, the State Fencibles of Philadelphia, the Providence Light Infantry the Hillyer Guard of Hartford, the Light Infantry of Washington and the Philadelphia City Troop were marked by their unique attitude and excellent bearings. The Fifth Maryland infantry closed up handsomely the line of this division, and their demonstrations of approval of their two days stay in the city were vociferously repeated.

Route and Only Officials and Guests.

Two companies of the Fifth United States Artillery, commanded by Brevet Major Generals Ruger and Arnold, acted as escort to Colonel Henry Sibley's division which comprised the City and State Governments with their respective guests. Boston had for guests the Mayors of New York, Philadelphia, Manchester N H, Wilmington, Del, Galveston, Wilmington, N C, Portland, Me., Aldermen Mackey of Charleston, S C and the Mayors of nearly all the Massachusetts cities besides guests from the Philadelphia Centennial Commission and the Centennial Committees of Concord and Lexington. The State Government which was followed in a hollow square of the Boston National Lancers, had for guests Vice-President Wilson, Justices Strong and Hunt of the United States supreme Court, the Spanish, Japanese, Chilian, Hayitien and Guatemalan Ministers, General William T. Sherman, Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell and Hon. Henry L. Dawes Senators, the Governors of the New England States, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Mississippi, Michigan, and other dignitaries The State officers and Senate and House of Representatives followed.

Col. Butler's division followed with the Loyal Legion, Orators and Chaplains of the day, State Judges, the Cincinnati, Massonic Grand Lodge, Veterans of 1812, Pilgrim Society and other societies.

The Fourth Division contained all the old organizations, including the ex-Confederates, towards whom all appeared desirous of showing cordial attention, the Amoskeag Veterans and Light Blue. The 5th followed finely mounted on the best blue mounted and equipped cavalry. The 2d Artillery, 16 guns, and the Unattached Cavalry brought up the rear of this brigade.

The first brigade commanded by Gen. Geo Burrill was set off by the Ninth Regiment which attracted all eyes by its scarlet coats, white trowsers and green plumes. The Fifth Maryland infantry closed up handsomely the line of this division, and their demonstrations of approval of their two days stay in the city were vociferously repeated.

The Procession Too Many Long—Police and Private Incompetence.

The procession was four hours and ten minutes in passing a given point and was estimated at ten miles long.

The decorations along the line were generally elaborate. The festival wreaths displays were made in Columbian avenue, where were also stands for the school children, in Chester Park and Washington and Tremont streets. Yet none was done in the business section. The public buildings, places of historic interest, the clubs and hotels on the line of march were tastefully decorated with bunting, and there were lots of history inscribed upon some. The Old State House near the scene of the Boston massacre, the first contact with the British troops, Faneuil Hall, "The Cradle of Liberty," were appropriately decorated.

The Immensity of the Invasion.

The number of strangers in the city during the day is at least, of between 300,000 and 350,000. About half of these departed to-night. There was no organized facilities for the departure of the crowds, and the throng about the depots and filling all the avenues there seemed rather to increase than to diminish. At a late hour many hundreds, perhaps thousands, unable even to reach the depots, were compelled to postpone their departure till the morrow.

Illumination of the Monument.

In consequence of the delay in starting, the commemorative exercises at the Monument were begun at a later hour than was intended. It was not until about 6 o'clock that the large audience on the main platform erected on the hill was called to order, and in consequence of the fatigues of the hour, the exercises were cut short to about one-fourth of the originally programme

George Washington Warren presided and Geo Chas. Downs delivered the oration confined to a graphic description of the battle and an eloquent appeal for the burial of all animosities of the late war. Gen. Sherman briefly spoke, saying the pageant surpassed anything of the kind in the world, and Governors Hartranft, of Pennsylvania, Bode of New Jersey, Ingersoll, of Connecticut; Dingley, of Maine, and Vice-President Wilson, Speaker Blaine and Senator Ferry were among the distinguished persons present.

Ovation by Night.

Darkness caused an abrupt termination of the exercises and the multitude was dismissed with a dandelion. This evening those of the visiting military organizations that remain in the city are generally resting of the very fatiguing march and exercises of the day.

Gorgeous Illuminations of the Evening

At a late hour this evening the streets are thronged by crowds of people, attracted by the brilliant illuminations of the public buildings. The State House and City Hall are the objective points, each presenting a gorgeous spectacle of gas jets transparencies and mottoes. The Washington statue at the main portals of Faneuil Hall Monument powerful calcium lights are displayed reflecting their brightness far out upon the sea and adjacent country. Various residences and private buildings are illuminated and there is a general display of fireworks throughout the city.

The Celebration a Grand Success

The celebration of to-day has far exceeded any anticipations that could have been formed of it. Carefully prepared estimates as the military at 11,500, and the aggregate the number of men in the procession at 20,000. Considering the vast numbers in the city, there has been an unusual degree of quiet, and but few arrests are reported at police headquarters this evening.

Delightful weather yesterday, but decidedly cool for June

Wagner and Gordon are to be hung a week from to-day.

The Washburn troupe gave a fine entertainment at Orono last evening, which was thoroughly enjoyed by a full house.

All those who took part in the celebration of the 17th at Boston yesterday will be dead-headed at the next Centennial.

Bangor did not have any Bunker Hill yesterday and everybody was congratulating themselves that they were out of that terrible crowd at the "Hub."

Washburn's Great Sensation at Norombega Hall to-night. The programme is varied and the well known excellence of this organization will undoubtedly draw a full house.

A dozen new wagons were hauled across Kenduskeag bridge yesterday afternoon by half-a-dozen horses, making a far more attractive street display than the last circus that was in Bangor.

The silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall J. Ekery was celebrated at their residence on Palm street on Wednesday. Among the many valuable presents was a handsome silver service.

Centre street, from Harlow street to its junction with Park street, is being widened and straightened, which will not only add to its appearance but make it much easier for travel than heretofore.

The members of the School Committee have commenced their official visits. Yesterday Judge Goodenow found time to examine the scholars at Mr. Pease's street school, and expressed himself gratified with the result

Among the coming excursions we are informed that the Unitarian Sunday school and society will go down river on the barge Clifford, Wednesday, June 30 and the Hinde Association will have the same barge July 14th.

We are told that with the falling prices of deals in Liverpool, England, shipments can be advantageously made from this port, provided not more than sixty five shillings freight is paid. Although that plenty of tonnage can be obtained at that rate.

Notwithstanding the explosion of that fire-works manufactory in Boston, and despite the frequent rhetorical explosions of anxious parents apropos of the Fourth, the boys are can fully hoarding away penalties for merriment in the soul-inspiring "snap-cracker" and in the tympanum-terrifying torpedo.

NEW CHEESE FACTORY. The Hermon cheese factory commenced operations on Wednesday, with very fair prospects, having received 2,763 pounds of milk, which they consider very good for the first day. They have a very superior building, which cost, including fixtures, about $2,000, and there is no reason why a large business should not be developed.

CADETS COMING (P) The Lawrence (Mass.) American a few weeks since stated that the Sherman Cadets of that city would leave Boston last evening at the close of the Centennial celebration for an excursion trip to Bangor and Portland. No notification of their coming has been received by the officers of the Jameson Guards, nor by any other organization or individual in this city, so far as can be learned.

SAD SUICIDE. On Wednesday a Miss Antoine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Antoine, of Veazie, visited this city and tried to purchase strychnine at several drug stores, which was refused. She was finally successful in obtaining poison, walked home, took a fatal dose and in a short time was dead No cause is assigned, but the coroner's jury may discover the motive that led the unhappy girl to such a tragic end.

PREPARING FOR THE FOURTH. The Jameson Guards, who are to visit Portland by invitation on the Fourth, will probably be accompanied by the Bangor Cornet Band. About forty men will go, and not only from the excellence of their marching, but also from the old boys' manner in which they are drilled by Captain Buzzell and the other officers, there is no reason to doubt that they will do credit to themselves and to the city.

Two rival organ grinders made melody with a vengeance for the people on Hancock square yesterday afternoon. While one upon "Silver Threads among the Gold" the other ground out "Mr. Farmer's Boy in the Morning," and followed in by what tune in which "Multiplie Guards" and "Captain White" were variously given a fashionable accompaniment was unattempted. The spectacle made lots of sport for the onlookers

Harrison Small vs. Robert P. Crowley. On exceptions and motion for new trial by the defendant. Argued by G. Jewett for defendant and W. H. McLellan for plaintiff.

A correspondent sends the following to the Cincinnati Gazette: A life-long Democrat from Columbia was accosted while buying a copy of to-day's Gazette, with the remark that it was a hopeful sign to see him ready to read a Republican paper "Yes, yes," he answered, 'this division of the school money did the thing for me, and there are plenty more like me at home. The Democratic party have effected a sale to the Roman Catholics, but they cannot deliver the goods Hereafter I am a Republican." I only offer this as a straw to show which way the wind is blowing "

MARGARET.

BY AUGUSTUS TAYLOR.

Into the garden I walked, no'er had I seen her before,
Under a clambering wild rose she stood in the shade of the door
Quiet and pale was her face, but suddenly bright were her eyes,
Fair as the newly born moon when low in the east she early rises.

There as I stood by her side my spirit grew happy and free,
Would I had said what I thought, that none would I marry but thee!
The far off bells were tolling for some one's funeral day,
And in the meadows close by the mowers were mowing the hay

Into the garden I walked, but once had I seen her before
I came and still was the house, wide open was every door
Then silent and trembling I went up in the curtain-less bed,
Where she lay shrouded in white, all winterly, lonely and dead.

There was a look on her face, as if she'd been dreaming of me,
Dear Margaret, then whispered I, "soon will I marry thee!"
And the far off bells were ringing, for 'twas some one's wedding day,
And in the meadows close by the mowers were mowing the hay

Silent and dark was my face, as under the dear one I bent,
Till by no gleam from the sky, it slumbered there dreamed and slept,
Till, with its swallow like wing, the wind in its wanderings blight
Touched that sweet face with its breath, and broke it in ripples of light.

Silent and dark was my heart, all sad deeply grieved for my home,
Yet no lover am I more, of the voice which told me I was not alone.
Yet how fitting to be dead, whether on a calm summer day
The fair fields gold ripening, and the mowers are mowing the hay

ELLA GOODWIN'S TRIAL.

BY S. ANNIE FROST

Ella Goodwin spoke in a fretful tone and her pretty face was puckered up into a most discontented frown.

It promised Charley I would step round for an hour or two and have a game of billiards.

"You might go just as well from home."

But still Algernon was already out of humor. His wife, after a tactful remark, a little severe to the wife to the effect that he was a fool not to ever getting married, a novel from under the sofa cushion, and was soon deeply engrossed in its contents.

Ella, who had already had a terrible headache, was not in the best of humor with her husband's indifference, and she felt very much inclined to cry.

Then there was a knock at the door, and Charley Goodwin, who had been a friend of Algernon's before his marriage, entered the room.

"Why, Ella, what's the matter?" he asked, as he noticed the tears in her eyes.

"Nothing much," she answered, trying to smile, "only Algernon has gone out and left me all alone."

"Then you must come with me and have a game of billiards," he said, laughingly.

"I wish I could," she replied, "but I promised Algernon I would not go out."

"Oh, never mind that," he said, "I'll soon make it all right with him. Come, get your hat and jacket, and we'll be off."

Ella hesitated a moment, and then, thinking that a game of billiards would be a pleasant change, she went upstairs to get ready.

Algernon looked up from his book as she entered the room, and asked her where she was going.

"Charley Goodwin has called for me, and I am going to have a game of billiards with him," she answered, pettishly.

"Very well, my dear," he said, quietly, "I hope you will enjoy yourself."

Ella was angry with him for not objecting to her going out, and she left the room without another word.

Algernon sighed as the door closed behind her, and then he went on reading.

Ella and Charley had a very pleasant game of billiards, and the former soon forgot her headache and her husband's indifference.

Charley Goodwin was a very handsome man, and he was also very fascinating, and Ella thought that he was the most delightful companion she had ever had.

Algernon was a quiet, studious man, and he had never cared for society, and Ella had often felt dull and lonely when he refused to go out with her.

Charley Goodwin was very attentive to her, and he was constantly calling at the house, and Ella looked forward to his visits with pleasure.

Algernon was pleased to see that his wife was happy, and he was glad that she had a friend who could amuse her when he was busy.

He had no suspicion that Charley Goodwin was trying to win his wife's affections, and he was quite surprised when Ella told him that Charley had asked her to run away with him.

"Why, Ella, how can you tell me such a thing?" he said, reproachfully. "I thought you loved me."

"I do love you, Algernon," she answered, "but I am tired of your indifference, and I am sure Charley loves me."

"Ella, you are mad," he said, sternly. "Charley Goodwin is a villain, and he is trying to ruin you."

"You are jealous," she said, angrily, "and I hate you for it."

"Ella, you will repent these words," he said, sadly.

"I shall not," she answered, "I am going to-night with Charley, and I shall never return."

"Ella, you must not do this thing," he said, imploringly. "Remember your duty to me, and to your child."

"I have no child," she said, "and I hate you. I am going with Charley, and you cannot prevent me."

"Ella, I implore you to stay," he said, "you will break my heart if you leave me."

"I am going," she said, "and you cannot prevent me."

"Ella, you will repent this," he said, sternly.

"I shall not," she answered, "I am going
